The government through Deped is implementing programs to assist students with disability. Disability is a condition of being unable to do thing in normal way and also a condition of being disable. Being disabled person is hard because there are things that cannot do even if they want to. Also some may find it hard to socialize with normal people. But having disability is also a reason to work hard in life.

The phenomenological study was conducted to describe the experiences of the students who have disabilities.

The main data sources of data were from interview to participants from Junior High School in GEANHS-Bailen. The researchers used the Moustakas method to show the essence of their experiences.

The researchers had three individual textural description to shown the experiences of the participants: Inspirational Athlete, Lucky Person, and the Gifted One. To describe the experiences of the participant, the researchers come up with the three descriptions: The students Reception, The students Battle, and The students Inspiration.
